SOURCE

In early January 1952, the Statistics Section of the Forschungsanstalt fuer Schifffahrt, Gewaesser- und Bodenkunde (Research Office for Shipping, Hydrology and Geology) in Berlin was requested by the Soviet Control Commission to submit a report within three days on night traffic on the waterways between Berlin and the Elbe River. Similar reports are to be submitted later on the waterways between Berlin and Hohensaaten (Oder-Havel Canal). *

Comment. As there is no economic reason for initiating night traffic in the Soviet Zone of Germany, it is believed that a plan had been prepared to facilitate the supply of the Soviet Army. It is noteworthy that only east-west waterways have been considered.
